The Harrod Home Page (http://economia.unipv.it/harrod). Includes: a chronology of Harrod’s life and career, a bibliography of Harrod’s writings (completing the bibliographies already published), a bibliography of the secondary literature on Harrod’s dynamics (continuously updated), links to Harrod materials on the web and to archival resources concerning him, and numerous transcriptions and pdf images of Harrod’s writings and of some secondary literature.

The electronic edition of The Collected Interwar Papers and Correspondence of Roy Harrod, edited by D. Besomi (http://economia.unipv.it/harrod/edition). For the printed edition see the Books section above: Besomi 2003). This is meant to overcome some obvious shortcomings implicit in the editorial procedure for printed editions, by offering a search engine enabling readers to bypass the editor’s categorization guiding his indexing and a section of updates including exchanges with colleagues on topics touched in the edition after publication. The electronic version includes most of the printed materials, transcriptions and pdf images of other materials, and other supporting documents.
